

Vintage glamour is proving a profitable business for specialist hair stylists, as Sophie Hines discovers

Miss Dixiebelle, Edinburgh

HERITAGE HAIR

Hair by Terri Capon

A

the eyes of the world focused on London this Summer, it was not just the sporting prowess of international athletes that was in the spotlight. London's breathtaking architecture – the ornate façades of Westminster, the turrets of Tower Bridge, the majestic dome of St Pauls – all spoke of a rich historical heritage at the heart of British life.

As a nation, we love looking back to the past – a history that is still in evidence all around us. This is echoed in our viewing habits, with new television programmes this Autumn ranging from The Paradise, an eight-part series set in a 19th century department store, to Mrs Biggs, a journey back to the infamous Great Train Robbery of the 1960s.

Our tendency to look back nostalgically through history has also shaped fashion and hair trends. While for some young women, the